Sin 132-33 OriginLab Corporation: Software Product Licensing Options (Valid for GSA Schedule 70 Government Sales Only)

All license types incorporate the use of license management software. With license management for Origin and OriginPro, your organization can be assured that only legal copies of OriginLab products are being used. Furthermore, for the Network license, the license management software can benefit system administrators by providing usage reports.

| License Types | | Options/Restrictions |
|---|--|---|
| Individual^{1,2,3,4} An Individual license provides the Origin software and allows the licensee to obtain license files that enable Origin to run on two (2) computers (work, home, and notebook). Only the licensee is granted the right to use Origin on any of the two computers. As such, this license type is sometimes referred to as named single-user, node-locked, or fixed seat. Individual licenses can be purchased in a bundle, thereby providing each user with his/her own serial number and the ability to install on work, home, and notebook computers. For greater mobility, a dongle can be obtained for each Individual license at the time of purchase. The first time the software is launched it will direct you to www.OriginLab.com to obtain a FLEX/m license file. Once the license file has been obtained and properly installed, the specified product will become locked to the user's computer. Group^{1,2} A group license provides the Origin software and allows the licensee to obtain a specified number of license files for a single serial number. Each user typically obtains one license file to enable Origin to run on their computer. This license type is best used by organizations who wish to deploy Origin only for a group of designated users. | Network^{1,2} A network license provides Origin and FLEX/m license management server software so that you can run Origin on a network. The FLEX/m server software monitors the concurrent use of Origin, allowing any number of machines to run Origin up to the licensed limit. Since this license type requires a network, the Origin installation program lets you choose at time of installation whether to install Origin itself fully on each computer, or use a server-client arrangement. If you choose a full installation on each computer, then users may also borrow a license from the network for a given time period, then detach from the network. The ability to borrow a license from the network allows users to enable Origin on their notebook computer, and then detach it from the network for later use. System administrators can use the license management software to report the number of concurrent licenses available and the number that are currently in use. If anyone has borrowed a license, they will be listed with a special notation. Laboratory¹ The lab license is well suited for academic research labs which have either networked or non-networked computers. This license offers a flexible and affordable way to deploy Origin on ten (10) computers, all using the same serial number. The software must be installed on machines owned by the college or university. Custom/Site^{1, 2} Our Technical Sales department can create a customized license for any customer who has specialized requirements. The license can be a combination of one or more license types. We encourage you to contact the Sales department to discuss your options. | <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Volume discounts apply 2. Academic discounts apply 3. Nonprofit discounts apply 4. Although the dongle is free, a $100 free will be charged to obtain a replacement for a lost or damaged dongle. www.OriginLab.com |
